U. S. NATO Pioneer Atomic Force Takes 50% Manpower Blow; Loses Inf. Units

1ST USA MISSILE COMMAND
VICENZA, ITALY

ONLY one year after it became "fully operational" in June 1958, the 1st U. S. Army Missile Command—the atomic support force for NATO ground units in Italy—has been forced to deactivate two rocket battalions and sustain a 50% manpower cut.

The impact of this slash was made known here by Col. Melville B. Osburn, the Commander, in response to questions by visiting newsmen.

The session with reporters on the USAF-sponsored National Media Tour came on the eve of the fiscal year-end deactivation of the Missile Command's two Honest John battalions and the official implementation of major reductions in other key elements.

Offsetting the cutback in U. S. strength is the fact that Italian Army units are being trained to man the Honest John weapons in Northern Italy—undoubtedly

General Taylor Calls For "Complete Reappraisal Of Our Military And Strategic Objectives"

I HAVE a friend in the Adjutant General's Department who knows my weakness for the reading of the pros and the comments found on officers' efficiency reports. You get some really delicious literary gems from time to time.

One was brought to me quite recently which described an officer who obviously was a pretty hot shot. He was all right. He had a brilliant potential, but the final sen-

Gen. Taylor

General Maxwell D. Taylor, who has been Chief of Staff of the Army for four years, retired from active duty on 30 June. On 25 June he made his farewell public address as Chief of Staff in an appearance before the National Press Club. In the question period which followed his formal speech, he was asked why he was retiring. He replied "For four years I have tried to modernize the Army, but have had only limited success. So I decided to withdraw one obsolescent general from the inventory." Herewith is the major portion of General Taylor's presentation. For Secretary McElroy's comments see Page 11.

tence of the rating officer had, with a note of regret, this to say. He said:

"Unfortunately, this officer is often confused when giving conflicting orders."

(Laughter)

I said, "Put in that file—not qualified for service in Washington."

So I feel, indeed, that some of our best citizens as they contemplate the problems of national events and try to understand them would admit to the same

Senate Demands Re-Study Of Air Defense Plan; Asks Aircraft-Missile Accounting

THE Pentagon's new "master plan" for air defense, endorsed by President Eisenhower only two weeks previously, was hit with a no-confidence vote in the Senate on 30 June.

Approving a recommendation by its Armed Services Committee, the Senate voted to require an immediate Defense Department re-study of the controversial Bomarc-Hercules programs, presumably just settled.

The study—which must be completed by 31 July unless the deadline is eliminated or extended by conference action—also calls for:

- A complete review of all missile-site construction.
- A reappraisal of Hawaiian defense needs.
- A progress report on the anti-missile missile, and
- A five-year prediction of the over-all threat to U. S. security.

In addition to backing the Committee's

Senate Group Ups Defense Bill $900-Million Over House Total

THE Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee on 1 July added $900-million to the House-passed military appropriations bill.

The increases include:

- $43-million to boost Marine Corps strength to 200,000,
- $380-million for a nuclear-powered supercarrier,
- $48-million for 49 Air Force jet utility and navigational trainers,

Chairman Dennis Chavez (D-N. Mex.) said a move to boost Army strength to 900,000 failed by a narrow margin in the casion to demonstrate restraint. However, it did occur to me that I might perform a limited service in taking some basic statement relating to our defense and express it first in that opaque way which is characteristic of a professional statement and then prove what I believe to be the case that namely, complex as our problems are, most of them lend themselves to lay interpretation.

It is possible to make this plain if one goes to the necessary trouble. So I would lead off and make a declaration of sincere belief, namely, that one of the great problems we are faced with in our country today is the need for a complete reappraisal of our military and strategic objectives in the light of the changes which have occurred in the world and which have invalidated, in my judgement, the dependence upon mas-subcommittee and added that the fight "could be renewed" when the full committee considers the bill on 7 July.

The total amount approved by the subcommittee—about $39.8-billion—is some $500-million more than the President had requested. When added to military construction funds, this sends the total military budget over the $41-billion mark.

The approximately $300-million provided by the Senate group for Army modernization is over and above the $200-million extra already voted by the House for Nike-Zeus ($137-million) and Army modernization ($63-million). About $116-million of the Senate increase is to come from reprogrammed Nike-Hercules funds.

The subcommittee eliminated about $255-million which the House had voted to speed up the Navy's anti-submarine warfare program. This amount was apportioned to the $360-million cost of the nuclear-powered supercarrier. The Navy's request for $260-million for a conventional carrier had been deleted by the House.

The Senate group also wrote into the appropriation bill mandatory language which will force the administration to keep the Army National Guard at a strength of 400,000, the Army Reserve at 300,000, and the Marine Corps at 200,000.

A House cut of $127.5-million in the Air Force Mace program was upheld by the Senate subcommittee. Defense officials testified earlier that the program would die unless the funds were restored.

Funds added by the House for the Atlas and Minuteman missiles ($85-million and $77-million, respectively) were retained by the Senate group with a provision that they may be used on any missile program at the discretion of the Defense Department.

Revised Allowances For Families In France

New travel per diem and housing allowances have been put into effect for U. S. Forces stationed in France.

The rates will be effective 16 July.

Under the housing rates, decreases were registered for some rental guarantee housing and for personnel living on the economy in the Maritime Department.

Housing allowances for families living on the economy in most other areas will remain static or show slight increases. All general officers will gain under the new allowances.

ARMY STUDIES GYROSCOPE CHANGES

USAREUR HEADQUARTERS
HEIDELBERG, GERMANY

THE Department of the Army in Washington has under study proposals to modify the already-changed Gyroscope program for rotation of units to and from overseas.

Announcement of changes in the Gyroscope program is expected from the Army this fall, after studies are completed on gyroscope operations during Fiscal Year 1959.

At its start, Gyroscope was intended to result in division rotation. This system was not found to be satisfactory. At present, no unit larger than a battle group is Gyroscooped.

U. S. Army Europe officials, although declining to discuss details on the Pentagon study, told a JOURNAL reporter here that the battle group rotation is under new examination to determine what is the optimum sized unit to shift. Many in the Army think that the battle group, like the division, is too large a unit.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY DIVISION-AERONUTRONIC, FOR THE

Ford Motor Company

THE AMERICAN ROAD
DEARBORN, MICHIGAN

We are pleased to announce the establishment of a new division of Ford Motor Company.

On July 1, 1959, Aeronutronic Systems, Inc., a subsidiary, will be merged with the Company, and its operations will be carried on by Aeronutronic, a Division of Ford Motor Company.

Aeronutronic was organized in 1956 with the goal of large-scale participation in the nation's space and missile programs. Over the past three years, the subsidiary has achieved an excellent reputation and record of accomplishment and we are happy to welcome the new operating end-product division of the parent company.

As a division of the company, Aeronutronic will continue to have as its objective the development and manufacture of advanced technical products for both military and commercial purposes in the areas of weapon systems and space systems, missile range systems and instrumentation, advanced electronics, data processing systems and computers.

The merging of Aeronutronic into Ford Motor Company will permit more effective Company support of Aeronutronic programs and thus facilitate the undertaking of more extensive projects than have been feasible in the past.

AERONUTRONIC — MEETING THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE MILITARY

Bilaterals Will Pave Way For Doubled Combat Effectiveness Of NATO's AirSouth

ALLIED AIR FORCES SOUTHERN EUROPE
NAPLES, ITALY

THE air striking power of NATO's southern flank can be doubled in the next year and then increased many more times.

This prospect was unfolded here in a meeting with newsmen by Lt. Gen. Richard C. Lindsay USAF, Commander of Allied Air Forces Southern Europe (AIR-SOUTH).

The outcome will depend on how long it takes for the U.S. to reach bilateral agreements with Italy, Turkey, and Greece concerning dissemination of information about nuclear weapons.

A JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

NATO commanders are hopeful that the diplomacy will be accomplished in quick order.

At present, AIRSOUTH'S nuclear capability is concentrated in the three squadrons of USAF North American F-100-D's and F-100-F's which are assigned on rotational duty by Tactical Air Command to Aviano, Italy, and Adana, Turkey. The Turks also are beginning to use the F-100.

AIRSOUTH, composed of air elements of the U.S., Italy, Turkey and Greece uses the Republic F-84-F as its primary weapon.

It is with this aircraft that Greek pilots for the past nine months have been learning the maneuvers that are required for use of atomic weapons, notably the Low Altitude Bombing System.

With the attainment of a LADS skill, the Greek squadron will be able to move quickly to a nuclear capability once it becomes possible for USAF officers to employ simulated nuclear weapons of actual sizes and shapes in the advanced training.

This cannot be done, however, until the bilaterals are accomplished.

General Lindsay told reporters that NATO plans call for an initial nuclear capability among one squadron each from Italy, Greece, and Turkey.

This would give the AIRSOUTH Chief six nuclear-capable squadrons, twice as many as now available.

General Lindsay, recounting progress made during the past year said that his air units are now maintaining a 10 percent strip alert status. He said that a 15-minute warning would see another 25 percent of AIRSOUTH's striking force in the air.

Asked about the enemy capability along AIRSOUTH's 1,700 mile perimeter, General Lindsay said that air activity in the Soviet satellites has shown a steady increase during recent months particularly in night flying and in all-weather training.

He said there is evidence that the Soviets have deployed some YAK 25 "Flashlight" all-weather fighters to the Satellite area.

From his headquarters at Naples, General Lindsay commands a force of approximately 1,000 aircraft organized under two major sub-headquarters, the Fifth Allied Tactical Air Force at Vicenza, Italy, and the Sixth Allied Tactical Air Force at Izmir, Turkey.

Under 5ATAF is the Italian 56th Tactical Air Force at Vicenza. Under 6ATAF are the Greek 28th TAF at Larissa; 1st Turkish TAF at Eskisehir; 2d Turkish TAF at Ankara; and the 3d Turkish TAF at Diyarbakir.

AIR SOUTH CHIEF

Lt. Gen. Richard C. Lindsay, USAF, a WWII strategic planner who later served in a similar capacity with the postwar JCS, will complete two years service on 1 August as Commander of Allied Air Forces Southern Europe in Naples, Italy.

Deputy Director of Strategic Plans in the Office of the JCS, General Lindsay was named Standing Group Liaison Officer to the NATO Council Deputies in July 1951.

After heading the Sampson AFB, N. Y., Training Center for the Korean buildup, General Lindsay returned to the Pentagon in April 1954 as Director of Plans in the Office of the Deputy CofS, Operations, and later was Assistant Deputy CofS for Operations.

There is speculation at AIR-SOUTH Headquarters that the next year will see General Lindsay tabbed for a key USAF assignment.

Maj. Gen. Colglazier Named Deputy C/S For Logistics; Three-Star Rank

PRESIDENT Eisenhower on 29 June nominated Maj. Gen. Robert W. Colglazier, Jr., for promotion to three-star rank and assignment as Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics.

General Colglazier, currently serving as Assistant Deputy, will succeed Lt. Gen. Carter B. Magruder who was nominated by the President last April for the four-star post of Chief, United Nations Command, Commander U. S. Forces Korea, and Eighth Army Commander.

General Colglazier is a brigadier general in the U. S. Army Reserve. Legislation has passed the House and is pending before the Senate Armed Services Committee to authorize his promotion to the permanent rank of brigadier general in the Regular Army.

FIRST ARMY'S CERTIFICATE OF APPRECIATION is presented to Carlyle Jones, public relations director of Sperry Gyroscope as Dr. Carl A. Frische, president, looks on. Award by Col. W. M. Van Antwerp (left), commander of First Army District Personnel Procurement, was acknowledgement of "direct and valuable aid to Army's recruitment mission" through company assistance programs.

$200,000 GIVE-AWAY

The Victory Park Housing Association, Ft. Bliss, Tex., is searching for former members to help share its $200,000 in profits accumulated over the last ten years.

The organization started in 1949 when Brig. Gen. Robert W. Berry, then Chairman of the Ft. Bliss Housing Board, met with interested post non-commissioned officers and conceived the idea of buying and erecting prefabricated houses to ease the current housing shortage.

Financing was arranged through local banks, and future residents worked on the project until it was completed.

Low monthly rents of $40 and later $45 attracted a long waiting list, and soon each of the 1,525 units was paid for, with the men who had worked on the project reimbursed for their time at $1 an hour.

Now there is a surplus of over $200,000 which, according to the organization's charter, must be divided among former members in direct proportion to the time they spent at Victory Park. Because many of the forwarding addresses are no longer good, Bliss officials say, they are now having trouble finding the people to share the profits.

Army Pitches Camp

500 Miles From Pole

A team of Army polar research experts has completed an 1,800-mile trek across the Greenland Icecap to Nyboes Land, northern Greenland, and has successfully established a base camp 500 miles from the North Pole.

The 41-man group are all volunteers from the Army Transportation Environmental Operations Group at Ft. Eustis, Va., the Snow, Ice and Permafrost Research Establishment, Wilmette, Ill., the Signal Corps, Quartermaster Corps and the Transportation Research and Engineering Command.

Purpose of the trip, known as "Operation Lead Dog," is to identify and mark safe over-snow routes on the Greenland Icecap, develop simple methods and techniques of polar navigation and transportation, and to conduct ice, snow and weather studies.

Navy Revamps System Of Shore Inspections

The Navy has revised its inspection system to eliminate duplication and overlapping of inspections and surveys of the Naval Shore Establishment and Shore-based Fleet Activities.

Under the new plan, which went into effect 1 July, only one survey a year will be made of all major activities in a Naval District.

The change was promoted by "expressions of concern by all levels of command and management" of repetitive inspections by "numerous survey parties," the Navy said.

The new plan calls for each area to be surveyed for a period limited to about a month. During the inspection period, a detailed itinerary will be scheduled. The remaining 11 months of the annual cycle "will be a respite from surveys to permit the shore commands to concentrate on the execution of their primary missions and functions," the Navy stated.

Detailed instructions are being promulgated which establish three echelons of command for survey: the Naval Inspector General, the management bureaus or offices, and the Districts.

The Naval Inspector General is RADM. John W. Aiels, III.

Everglades Rewards Creative Thinker

William R. Apple, HM3, assigned to the USS Everglades (AD-24), under command of Capt. Gilvin M. Slonim, is winner of a creative writing competition recently concluded aboard the destroyer tender.

For his winning essay, entitled "Creative Thinking," Hospital Corpsmen Apple was awarded an all-expenses paid trip to New York where he attended a three-day meeting of the Creative Problem Solving Institute, University of Buffalo. The contest was sponsored by Alex F. Osborn, President of the University's Creative Education Foundation.

Hospital Corpsman Apple's expenses were paid out of the Everglades' ship recreation fund.

Runner-up in the contest was another HM3, Robert S. Gally. The contest was under supervision of Ens. Al Herman, Everglades Damage Control Assistant. He guided the writing competition on off-duty time.

The writing contest took as its theme the observation by Albert Einstein that "Imagination is more important than knowledge."

New Nautilus Skipper

LCdr. Lando W. Zech has been named successor to Cdr. William R. Anderson, Commanding Officer of the nuclear submarine, Nautilus (SSN-571).

Navy Seeks Uniform Items For Collection

The U. S. Naval Uniform Shop is seeking the help of All Hands in building up a collection of historical items for a Navy Uniform display.

LCdr. J. D. Graziadei, SC, Clothing Officer of the Naval Uniform Shop, is interested in securing uniforms of bygone eras; particularly the Officer's Cap worn during the WWI period. This cap resembles a railroad conductor's cap. He also is hoping to obtain an old style boat cloak, and any other uniforms of WWI, or prior years, back to the Revolutionary War.

Other items needed to fill in the collection are old swords, old style epaulettes, Fore and Aft hats, and the old full dress sword belt. He's also asking for old rating badges and insignia.

Those who care to make donations of old relics or uniform items should send them to LCdr. Graziadei at the following address: U. S. Naval Uniform Shop, Third Avenue and 29th St., Brooklyn 32, N. Y.

MATS' SENIOR NAVAL OFFICER

A veteran naval aviator has assumed duties as Senior Naval Officer, Headquarters MATS, Scott AFB, Ill. He is Capt. Albert H. Wilson, USN, who previously served as Commanding Officer, Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Tex.

He relieved Capt. Carl E. Giese, USN, as top naval representative in the Military Air Transport Service.

A native of Lewiston, Idaho, Captain Wilson makes his official home of record at Clarks Fork, Idaho. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy in 1931, Captain Wilson is married to the former Marion Bell Richardson of Crisfield, Md., and is the father of four children, two sons and two daughters.

Captain Giese was presented the Legion of Merit by the MATS Commander, Lt. Gen. William H. Turner, for his "outstanding executive leadership and application of a thorough knowledge of the capabilities of transport operations."

WASPS Gather At Scott

THREE women pilots who ferried combat planes for the Air Force during WWII were recently reunited for the first time since the war at Scott AFB, Ill.

Two former members of the Women's Auxiliary Service Pilots Squadron (WASP), were at MATS headquarters during their annual two-week tour of active duty as Air Force Reserve majors.

The third was Mrs. Ann Turner, who married her former commander in the Ferrying Command, present MATS Commander Lt. Gen. William H. Turner.

Mrs. Clark, married to an Englewood, N.J., real estate and insurance salesman, is the mother of 1st Lt. William G. Clark, a C-118 pilot now assigned to McChord AFB, Wash. Another son, 1st Lt. W. Gerould Clark III, served with the Tactical Air Command in the Far East.

Not shown is Maj. Adela Scharr, who now teaches both an eighth grade class at Lowell School in St. Louis, Mo., and a flying class at the St. Charles, Mo., Airport.

MOVE HQ. CAP

Brig. Gen. Stephen D. McElroy, USAF, National Commander of the Civil Air Patrol, has announced that the National Headquarters of the Civil Air Patrol is moving to Houston, Tex., in August.

CAP's National Headquarters has been at Bolling AFB, D.C., for the past 13½ years. Its new home will be at Ellington AFB, southeast of Houston. Ellington is a reserve and national guard training base of the 10th Air Force, which, like CAP, is part of the Continental Air Command (CONAC).

Col. Watkins New CO 322d AD In France

Col. Tarleton H. Watkins has assumed command of 322d Air Division (Combat Cargo) from Col. Clyde Box. Colonel Watkins has been deputy division commander for the past year.

Maj. Gen. E. J. Timberlake, vice-commander of USAFE, pinned an oak leaf cluster to the Legion of Merit on Colonel Box for outstanding service during his term as division commander from 1956 to 1959.

The entire complement of Evreux-Fauville Air Base and representatives of other division units based in Europe took part in the change of command review.

Colonel Box and his family left for the United States where his next assignment is at Pope AFB, N.C., where he will command 464th Troop Carrier Wing. Colonel Box recently was nominated for the rank of brigadier general.

Replacing Colonel Watkins as deputy division commander is Col. J. B. Wallace who formerly commanded Evreux-Fauville AB. Col. George O. McCafferty succeeds Colonel Wallace as base commander.

MATS Will Move Command Post

MATS Command Post—hub of operations for its fleet of over 400 cargo and troop carrying planes—will move from its old quarters in the basement of Military Air Transport Service Headquarters to newly-renovated theater at Scott AFB, Ill., 15 August.

Cost of the move will be approximately $100,000, of which $55,000 will be for improved communications equipment, and $45,000 for rebuilding the old theater. The new post will provide space for additional personnel who may be needed in emergencies.

Directing the project are Col. Justin C. Gunnison, Chief of the Operations Control Division, and Lt. Col. Aubrey C. Sears, Chief of the Command Post Transport Control Center.

AF HOUSING

Grand total of Capehart-Rains housing units completed, planned or in construction stages at USAF stateside bases as of 1 June was 62,719, according to Brig. Gen. James B. Knapp, SAC director of civil engineering.

The general pointed out that 28.95—46 per cent—of these are or will be at SAC bases.

Completed as of 1 June were 15,116, of which 10,674—71 per cent—were SAC's.

"These are impressive figures," General Knapp said, "and indicate excellent progress in providing the required family housing. However," he concluded, "in SAC alone we still need 23,000 more units for our officers and NCOs and more than 30,000 for our junior airmen."

A Gap In NATO's Atomic Bridge

The Southern European Task Force at Verona, Italy, is paying a stiff price in combat effectiveness because of: 1) its success in training Italian units, and, 2) budget cuts. At the start of fiscal year '60, the U. S. Army's pioneer atomic force finds itself minus two of its four nuclear-capable rocket and missile units, and totally without U. S. Infantry security forces.

As reported in on-the-scene accounts in this issue from SETAF Headquarters at Verona and 1st U. S. Army Missile Command Headquarters at Vicenza by JOURNAL Assistant Editor Daniel Z. Henkin, the NATO atomic force in Northern Italy has lost 50% of its U. S. manpower.

A Sky Cavalry squadron (battalion), which was breaking new tactical ground in the field of target acquisition, has been reduced to a troop (company) sized unit. The Command's crack atomic engineer battalion has been pared to company strength.

There is a prospect for revived combat effectiveness sometime in the future as a result of the successful joint efforts of the U. S. Missile Command and the Italian Army to train an Italian Missile Command capable of replacing the two U. S. Honest John battalions that have been deactivated. But the fact of the matter is that at the start of fiscal year '60, the U. S. Honest John teams are gone and the Italians are still months away from full combat readiness.

It is one thing when budget requirements demand that ZI or rear echelon overseas units be torn apart. But it is quite another situation when such forces as SETAF and its 1st Missile Command are decimated. Congress and the American public need to know what is happening to our front-line forces. JOURNAL readers can look forward in the coming weeks to further reports on the NATO area and then a comprehensive review of NATO progress and problems.

Retiring Army Chief of Staff Leaves A Legacy

General Maxwell D. Taylor retired from the Army this week after 37 years of distinguished service in war and peace and four years as Chief of Staff and a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Few of the objectives to which he devoted his talent and efforts have been achieved, but he leaves behind a legacy of devotion to the defense of the United States, dignity and reserve in a frustrating job, and loyalty both to his superiors and to those who served under him.

The maintenance of the Army's strength in divisions and manpower and the modernization of its weapons and equipment were outstanding among the objectives for which he strove. He favored, too, a budget arrangement by which funds would be meted out horizontally by missions rather than vertically by services. He felt that the Joint Chiefs of Staff should have a hand in budget making. He believed, too, that the continuing drive for a higher degree of merger among the services could accomplish little because it would not solve the major problems of national security.

Like his predecessor, General Matthew Ridgway, General Taylor leaves his high office disappointed at the lack of progress toward his major objectives and at the Army's decline in size, power, and effectiveness.

Prior to his retirement, General Taylor visited many of the Army's principal activities, boosting their morale and their faith in their future. His final visit was to Ft. Campbell, Ky., and the 101st Airborne Division he commanded so brilliantly in World War II. At all of his calls he showed the high regard in which he holds the American soldier and the faith he puts in him. On General Taylor's last day, 30 June, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker and the top civilian and military leaders in Washington showed their regard and respect for him in a farewell review and ceremony at Ft. Myer, Va.

His successor, General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, took the oath of office on Wednesday, 1 July. The task he faces will be as difficult as that of his predecessors, but, like them, he will have the support and backing of those who believe limited warfare is a grave threat and that the ground soldier is still a potent factor in national defense.

Design And Development Of Aircraft And Missiles

The Senate-House conferees on the military construction authorization bill will face important decisions in reaching an agreement as to what they will recommend to their respective houses on the Senate-approved provisions relating to the missile controversy and also to the requirement that Congress must give specific legislative authority for the design, development and procurement of all aircraft and missiles before funds may be appropriated.

Congress' entry into the Service argument over the Nike system versus the Bomarc missile is understandable—in fact Secretary McElroy invited them to force his hand. However, now that a so-called "master plan" has been approved by the President one wonders why the Senate insists on demanding further reports. Of course, in today's fast moving world of technology no "plan" on defense can be considered permanent. Nevertheless, we believe Congress should give the administration more time to develop its newly approved program.

The provision requiring specific legislative authority on such technical defense matters as design and development of aircraft and missiles, while doubtless within the rights of Congress, is unwise. In the first place, the professional military people are the ones best qualified to make such decisions. Moreover, the delays and world-wide publicity which would be occasioned by Congressional consideration of these problems could be very damaging, indeed. We hope this provision will be dropped by the conferees.

READERS' VIEWS

Retirement of Reserves

■ As a subscriber to THE JOURNAL, may I commend your article, appearing on pages 1 and 28 of the 13 June issue, reporting the case of certain Reserve officers, who served in the Armed Forces prior to 12 November 1918; who were subsequently retired under existing Federal statute; who have been and are now being denied their full and legal retired pay rights and who recently presented to the United States Court of Claims, their petition for redress.

Through the years, the opponents to granting equality of treatment for members of all of the components of the Armed Forces—Regular and Non-Regular—have indulged in factually erroneous deception, without regard for the statutory rights of the claimants against whom their attacks have been and are still being directed. One of their favorite themes has been "The cost would be prohibitive." They then proceed to quote unsubstantiated and fictitious data in the hope of creating in the minds of official Washington who will consider the claims, an attitude which would support their warped sense of equity.

On the basis of 6,000 claimants, with an average age of 68 years and with a life expectancy of about 7 years, it is reasonable to assume that with the exception of a few hardy individuals, the members of this group will be gone in a relatively short time.

In arriving at a figure comparable to

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Four members of the Senate and 55 members of the House of Representatives simultaneously introduced legislation 30 June to authorize an "Assistant Secretary of the Navy for the Marine Corps" and fix statutory personnel strength for the corps.

50 Years Ago—The organization of volunteer relief columns to aid in expanding the personnel that the Army Medical Department can call upon in case of war, was begun by the Red Cross more than a year ago, after the manner of other nations, notably England, where there is the valuable St. John's Ambulance Brigade, as well as an association bearing the same name. Dr. Gustavus M. Blech is at the head of this work in Chicago. He reports that he has five columns completely organized and others partly.

95 Years Ago—Incomplete as the Virginia campaign is, it has already developed sufficiently vast proportions to reveal to the Nation the magnitude of the task before it. To declare that the present is to be the last and most rapid campaign of the war is more than any one cares to assume . . .

actual cost, the initial annual cost would be subject to reduction in total amount paid in each succeeding year, due to attrition by death until all the beneficiaries have passed on. Based on liberal allowance for future longevity of each claimant and other factual considerations which govern this type of cost computation, a realistic estimate of aggregate cost for both accumulated and future retired pay for this group would fall short of $250 million. It would be interesting to know the factual basis for the $500 million figure used in Memo item headed The Court of Claims, appearing on page 14 of the 13 June issue of THE JOURNAL.

The Justices who will decide this issue will be guided by the legal merits of the case and not by fabrication and/or extraneous data.

This is not a budgetary issue. That equity never bears a price tag, is a part of our American heritage. Let us all act accordingly.

MICHAEL J. KELLY,
COLONEL, USAR-RETIRED.

Changing The Rules

■ Imagine that you are running a 30 mile cross-country race. At the end of three or four miles, you are stopped and sent back to the starting line. You start again. Later, at about mile 15, some new runners enter the race ahead of you, after having been brought there by the same referee. You observe that these runners were earlier disqualified from the race for reasons unknown to you. You protest the unfairness of their entry at this point, but your claim is rejected by the judges who say: "We're sorry, but this is too big a race for us to be fair with everyone. The rules for one race are not the same as for another. Furthermore, we had a lot of empty spaces in our scorebooks, which we had to fill. And, besides, you don't seem to realize how honored you are to be allowed to run farther than the others before we take you out of the race."

Although this imaginary incident seems far-fetched, there is an analogous situation right now in the US Army, involving many officers who were integrated into the RA after 1 January 1948. Some forfeited as much as six years of promotion list credit for the privilege. Others lost higher reserve grades. Almost all were slighted in the expanded promotion program that followed Korea.

Ironically, the Army recently announced the existence of vacancies in a number of year groups going back as far as 1942. In other words, there are spaces available on the Army list that would credit us with service actually performed.

"CAPTAIN, ARMOR"

General Taylor Calls For "Complete Reappraisal Of Our Military And Strategic Objectives"

From first page—

sive retaliation as the fundamental key-stone of our strategic art; that following such a reappraisal we then need to determine once more the building blocks which should go into our national strategy.

Yardsticks Of Sufficiency

We should determine the kinds of military forces which are appropriate to these changed conditions and, after that, then determine yardsticks of sufficiency for these various functional categories. I mean by functional categories those functions that contribute toward strategic retaliatory forces; those forces that go into continental air defense; the so-called limited war forces; the anti-submarine forces. Those are the categories I have in mind.

Then, having determined what is the yardstick, how much is enough in these areas, then we should recast our entire budget-making procedure of the Department of Defense so that we budget, not vertically in terms of the forces of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, but horizontally in terms of these functional forces.

Now, that is clear, isn't it?

(Laughter)

Well, if it is not, then let me tell you a story. I would like to recount the parable of the unhappy mess sergeant.

Once upon a time there was a company commander who was having real trouble with his company mess. The men were going AWOL; they were complaining of the quality of the food. He realized it was time for him to make a personal investigation.

"Do It Yourself" Commander

Now I stress the fact the company commander decided to do this himself. He didn't feel the need of an outside expert. He just didn't call in a dietitian or hotel manager. He was one of these old fashioned, "do it yourself" kind of company commanders. It didn't take him long when he got down into the mess to find out what the trouble was.

He had a mess sergeant who was new at the job. He was a fine, upstanding soldier, but very little experience in the mess. As a matter of fact, he had been transferred over from the Finance Department. And so, having no personal experience, he had to turn to his cooks, and he had four of them. They were a pretty tough lot. They were hardheaded. They were stubborn, and they liked to have their own way. Furthermore, although one was a little older than the others, no one was really boss. Furthermore, they were all artists, more or less in their own right. A couple of them had worked together before so they knew each other and they happened to be specialists in airy souffles and that sort of thing.

Argued Amongst Themselves

The third man was a seafood expert. He went into what the French call the fruits of the sea; whereas the fourth fellow was an unimaginative cook in the art of meat and potatoes and that sort of thing.

Now the trouble was these cooks could never get together and agree on the next day's menu. They argued amongst themselves so that when morning came and it was time for the mess sergeant to go to the market and make his purchases, all four came running out with four different lists and thrust them into the sergeant's hand.

Well, he was always in a hurry. He never had enough time so he had to go up to market with the four lists. But he did notice the money value of all four lists was about all he had to spend for the entire day. So he got into market and he was surrounded by these vendors all trying to hawk their wares and he would have to go around buying as best he could what looked good or sounded good and then return to the mess hall with his groceries.

Well, he found his cooks unhappy and having a hard time and well they might because when they got all this stock of groceries, it never came out right. He didn't have the necessary ingredients for three square meals for the troops, and the troops complained.

New Procedure

Well, the company commander looked this over and said obviously this isn't the way to run the railroad, so he called in the mess sergeant.

He called in the cooks and said, "Look here boys, we are going to change all this. In the first place, sergeant, you get from these cooks a menu for at least a week in advance and check it over and bring it to me and I will approve it.

"Then you guys go down to the market and don't listen to the vendors. You bring what is on the menu. Bring it back and turn it over to the cooks and see that they make the right chow out of it. If you have any trouble with these boys, fire them all and put the best one in charge.

"Now finally, if you really then need any help, you might have a mess council formed out of three or four of your best NCO's and you can turn to them from time to time and ask how the mess is doing."

Well, to make a long story short, that is exactly what they did, and the improvement was immediate.

The mess sergeant kept his job and the captain was promoted.

SEC'Y McELROY COMMENTS

At a press conference held at Quantico in connection with the top-level DoD meeting there, Secretary of Defense McElroy was asked to comment on General Taylor's reason for retiring and his "Parable of the Unhappy Mess Sergeant" as given in his address at the National Press Club.

Secretary McElroy replied:

"Well, as to your first question, of course, I don't know precisely why General Taylor left. If that's what he said, why I have got to stand on that basis.

"The unhappy mess sergeant, I don't think I quite remember the parable, but let me tell you again what I think from the article I read seemed to be the recommendation of General Taylor, what I think about it.

"He seemed to me to be recommending that what we should do in budgeting and the dividing up of budgeted funds would be to do this by missions rather than by services, and I would say that anyone who approaches this problem initially which, of course, he isn't doing, but as I did when I came into the Department, I felt exactly the same way, that this is the way we should undertake the budgeting of a military program.

"He also said that once you have enough for the support of any one of these missions then we shouldn't do any more. I also agree with that. It is an extremely difficult thing, however, to determine when you have enough of a strategic retaliatory force, when you realize that most likely that this retaliatory force will have to be after having been struck by an enemy's nuclear attack.

"Now, we know something about what kind of damage the nuclear attack would bring to us, but no one in history has yet taken a full-scale nuclear attack and been able to count what he had left . . .

"All I am saying is that in a philosophical discussion in this matter of budgeting I agree fully with General Taylor, but I would say the working out of it, just as in so many things that you do, is not as essential as discussing it philosophically."

THE ARMY MISSILE COMMAND IN NORTHERN ITALY (see First Page) must either be tabbed at an early date to receive new weapons, such as the Sergeant and the upcoming Pershing solid propellant missiles or else face the certainty of becoming an outdated outfit. With the loss of its two Honest John battalions, the 1st U. S. Army Command now must rely for its punch on the slow-reacting 80 mile range Corporal missile. It requires up to 12 hours for a full checkout.

ASSIGNMENT OF THE PERSHING to U. S. NATO forces in Northern Italy would give this organization an extended range weapon that could sweep a broad arc including strategic Communist targets. On the other hand, a decision may be made—certainly not immediately—to assign the Italian Army full responsibility for supporting NATO ground forces in Northern Italy. This would permit the U. S. Missile Command, now tied to a single locale, to be redesigned for quick deployment to other areas, if necessary.

THE ARMY'S DECISION to cut the Northern Italy SkyCav unit from battalion to company strength gives sharp focus to the fact that current manpower cuts are damaging combat effectiveness. Army leaders have stressed the need for an expanded target acquisition capability—exactly SkyCav's task. Field tests being conducted by the 1st Missile Command SkyCav unit will be curtailed. The manpower cuts will be offset to some degree by use of drones, but it is a question how fast the Army will be allowed to procure these target acquisition devices.

THE PEAK COMBAT READINESS of the Army's 10th Special Forces Group in Germany is pointed up in the results of communication proficiency pay tests. Out of 20 soldiers in the 10th who took the tough examination, 18 were certified for extra pay.

THE ARMY'S MOST UNUSUAL "IRISHMAN" is a member of the Special Forces unit, commanded by Col. Michael Paulick. Newsmen on the USAF National Media Tour who recently visited the 10th were introduced to a "Sergeant First Class Kennedy," a heavy weapons specialist. He speaks Polish, German, Russian, Czech, "and also a fairly good English." Sergeant Kennedy, like other members, changed his name after joining the crack Army group. Some of the soldiers have families behind the Iron Curtain.

GERMAN ARMY NCO'S are being trained at the Seventh U. S. Army's NonCommissioned Officer Academy at Bad Tolz, (see page 27). During the past fiscal year, the German Army was able to send 17 NCO's to the school. More will be enrolled in the next 12 months.

NO IMMEDIATE PROBLEMS ARE ANTICIPATED, but there is a potential for future difficulties in the fact that Italian Army Missile Command, now comprised of two Honest John battalions, is led by a brigadier general. It was trained by the U. S. Army's 1st Missile Command, whose chief is a colonel. Many in the army believe that all of the missile commands, which are designed to operate independently in much the same fashion as a division, should be headed by a brigadier general—particularly in view of their weapons potential.

DEPLOYMENT OVERSEAS of Lacrosse missile units is expected to mean retirement from active duty of the Army's pioneer nuclear weapon, the 280 mm cannon. Lacrosse, capable of performing similar missions, has outstanding mobility characteristics, something that cannot be said for the weapon it will replace.

ARMY COMMANDERS IN EUROPE are hopeful that development and production progress on the low-yield nuclear Davy Crockett weapon will permit its availability to combatant units within two years. The plan is to put this weapon, with an atomic punch in the one KT level, at the battle group level.

MILITARY CAVALRY ENTHUSIASTS, unseated in the U. S., will be saddened to learn that Turkey plans to mechanize its three horse divisions. This was told to U. S. newsmen in Heidelberg by General Rustu Erdelhuhn, Chief of the Turkish General Staff. He said all of Turkey's 16 NATO divisions would be built along Pentomic lines. General Erdelhuhn was at Heidelberg for an informal visit with General C. D. Eddleman, CinC of the U. S. Army Europe.

THE COMMANDER OF NATO's AIRSOUTH, Lt. Gen. Richard C. Lindsay, USAF, will have operational control of Nike missile units being deployed to Northern Italy and Eastern Turkey. In Italy, the Nike batteries will be manned by the Italian Air Force. They will be under Army control in Turkey.

SUPPORT FOR NATO AMONG CITIZENS of Italy, Greece, and Turkey is certain to be strengthened when bilateral agreements are reached (see page 3), permitting Republic F-84 squadrons of these three nations to achieve a nuclear capability. The prestige factor counts for much in attaining broad-based support of NATO. This has been noted in Italy, where units trained by the 1st U.S.A. Missile Command are manning Honest John rocket launchers. As far as wide segments of the Italian public are concerned, the Honest Johns are like IRBM's; both have a nuclear capability.

CAPEHART MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING PROGRAM, threatened by a possible Presidential veto of the Omnibus National Housing bill, was saved when the Senate voted a 15-month extension on 30 June. The extension, added to the Military Construction Authorization bill, carries a 20,000 unit limitation.

ADMIRAL C. R. "CAT" BROWN stirred interest among visiting U. S. newsmen at his Allied Forces Southern Europe Headquarters in Naples last week with the observation that the Red Navy maintains in the bottled-up Black Sea a force that has more ships—but no carriers—than the mighty U.S. Sixth Fleet. Presumably, the Soviets want to achieve maximum training results at minimum costs in "home waters." Asked if he could give specific details on the Black Sea Fleet, Admiral Brown charted a careful course through the security shoals. He said the Red force in the Black Sea "has a goodly number of cruisers and destroyers and a big chunk of submarines."

SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON (D-Mo) suggested in a TV interview on 28 June that a single service is needed to provide "maximum security at minimum cost." He said he sees "no reason why the American people should be supporting three armies and six air forces."

THE FORMER AIR FORCE SECRETARY also said he thinks the new Defense Department air defense blueprint is "wrong" because "it over-emphasizes our defensive structure as against our offensive structure." We should concentrate, he said, on "such matters as SAC, the new Polaris submarine weaponry, and the new long range weaponry."

A NUCLEAR INNOVATION featured the recent "keel-laying" at Barrow-in-Furness for Britain's first nuclear-powered boat, the submarine Dreadnought. Prince Philip moved a handle which caused a gamma ray beam to operate a winch that drew a 30-foot high section of the vessel into position. Reporting the launching, the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post said editorially the next day: "Are we right to go in for this expensive project? If this new type is the answer to the conventional submarine," the editorial questioned, "would not its cost have provided enough destroyers to give a better answer?" The editorial adds, however, that "nuclear energy is undoubtedly the propellant of the future."

THIS YEAR'S ROA CONVENTION in Denver was so crowded, convention officials report that even major generals had to share the same room. In one known case, two Army Generals arrived early in the morning of 24 June, only to find that there were no rooms available where they had planned to stay. After some searching they finally found the last two rooms at one hotel, but one—it was discovered—was loaded with Reserve Officers sleeping both on the beds and on the floor. As a result, the ROA says, Major Generals John Bowen, Army Assistant Chief of Staff, and Ralph Palladino, Chief of Reserves and ROTC, became roommates for a night.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL J. SHOOK, JR., has the distinction of being one of the first officers to transfer from the Navy to the Air Force under recent Inter-Service Transfer authority. An apparent rank confusion occurs in the Air Force orders which give him his new assignment. The orders list him as "LT COLONEL J SHOOK, JR. . . USN." The explanation is that his first name is Colonel. His switch from a Navy lieutenant to an Air Force captain was effective 1 July.

A MAJOR HEADACHE FORSEEN by Pentagon planners in the recommendations of the President's Committee to Study the Military Assistance Program (The Journal, 27 June) is the anticipated competition between the Defense Department and the Military Assistance program for a share of the budget dollar. Up until the present time, military assistance funds were contained in the Mutual Security appropriation. Switching these appropriations to the Defense Department, it is feared, will have two detrimental effects: first, it will cause an enormous jump in the size of Defense appropriations submitted to Congress; and secondly, it may make the rivalry between Defense and military assistance for the budget dollar even more severe.

MOST OF THE RECOMMENDATIONS proposed by the President's Committee to study the Military Assistance Program, including more authority for the State Department, unified military commanders and military advisory groups, are expected to be put into effect within the next few months, without prior approval of Congress. Much discussion can be expected, however, on two major points of the President's new program when Congress reconvenes in January. These points are the switch of the military assistance budget from the Mutual Security Appropriations to the Defense Department and the provision of military assistance authorization on a three to five year basis. Both of these will require the approval of Congress.

NO BIG PUSH HAS BEEN SET for the atomic airplane project by the Department of Defense. According to the comments of Defense Secretary Neil McElroy at his Quantico press conference 27 June, the atomic-powered airplane "will continue to be supported on the basis of its being a research and development project, and a long-range one at that." He said that it would have a steady, even flow of funds, and not be put in the class of urgent projects which will receive sharp additions in funds in order to speed the availability of the system.

Army Revamps Plan For Professional EM

The Army is revamping its program for enlisted men who have scientific and engineering training to give them greater professional responsibility and to reduce the frequency of interruption of their duties.

Under the new plan, soldiers with specialized training will receive the title Scientific and Engineering Assistant to clearly delineate their backgrounds and to show they "are assisting Army research and development project leaders."

Since 1948, the Army has operated a program known as the enlisted Scientific and Professional (S&P) Program for the purpose of getting maximum utilization from enlisted men, primarily draftees, who possessed college backgrounds. Since inception of the S&P Program, the Army has gained technical assistance from more than 30,000 men while they served two-year tours of obligated service.

The new Program calls for local advisory groups to assist commanders in placing enlisted men with professional backgrounds and adoption of personnel standards similar to those used by the Civil Service Commission.

Many soldiers in the current program who meet the new selection standards will be transferred to the new S&E program, while those who do not will retain their S&P titles and status until they are discharged.

ADVANCED RESEARCH ROCKETRY AND INSTRUMENTATION FOR AIR AND SPACE

COOPER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, MARQUARDT SUBSIDIARY,

PROVIDES PROVEN CAPABILITY: SUCCESSFUL RECORD OF

PARTICIPATION IN AMERICA'S MOST ADVANCED RESEARCH PROGRAMS

ASPLAN

Cooper Development Corporation

a subsidiary of

The Marquardt Corporation

DELIVERS MAJOR "BREAKTHROUGHS" BOTH ON-TIME AND WITHIN BUDGET!

PROJECT ECLIPSE PRODUCED NEW DATA on ionospheric changes occurring during IGY solar eclipse, using Cooper Development Corporation's ASPAN rocket vehicles. CDC rockets fired in the Project reached the 150-mile region of the ionosphere carrying 60-lb. payloads—a world's record for two-stage solid propellant rockets. With prime responsibility under the Naval Research Laboratory, CDC was responsible for the instrumentation, for vehicle and launcher development, and conducted the actual launchings from shipboard. CDC's development of ASPAN opened the door to practical application of solid propellant vehicles to rocket astronomy.

AMERICA'S FIRST EXPLORER satellite was boosted into orbit by high-speed rocket motors produced by CDC, under a contract to California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. As sub-system contractor, CDC produced the solid propellant motors and performed the final assembly on the last 3 stages; dynamically balanced the entire final assembly and, on subsequent Explorer projects, provided telemetry antenna and power pack equipment.

COOPER ASP—VERSATILE PRODUCTION ROCKET—is utilized as either a self-contained, payload-bearing single-stage vehicle, or as a second-stage vehicle for larger boosters. Capable of carrying 25 to 100 lb. payloads into the ionosphere, the CDC ASP has been successfully applied to upper-atmospheric research, meteorologic and weather reconnaissance.

OTHER COOPER ACHIEVEMENTS:

ASP

MAJOR PARTICIPATION in numerous other programs—Projects Vanguard, Juno, Sunflare, Cloverleaf, Rockoon, Mercury, AMQ-15 Weather Reconnaissance System, and Pioneer.

SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT of five nuclear research programs—Operations Red Wing, Hardtack, Plumbob and Project Cleansweep, plus the ASPAN-launched "Falling Sphere" for the Office of Naval Research.

FORWARD RESEARCH on improved instrumentation: for CDC's Window Atmospheric Sounding Projectile—first systematized meteorological rocket to successfully measure wind conditions above 100,000 feet; for determining conditions to be encountered by manned satellites; and for other advanced air and space developments.

Marquardt provides added resources
*as Cooper Development Corporation

The Marquardt Corporation*

COOPER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION has a proven record of achievement. Responsible: an integrated team of creative specialists—with a demonstrated ability for translating advanced concepts into field-reliable hardware.

CDC COMPLETE PROJECT SERVICE delivers start-to-finish answers to problems involving military and research rocket systems—from design, development and production to field testing and data evaluation—in minimum time, and at minimum cost. Case in point: Cooper's 5-month record on the complete Navy-sponsored Redwing project, which included instrumented rocket vehicles, launchers and both airborne and ground telemetering instrumentation. Availability of CDC's proven systems trims development time to a minimum, while the Corporation's complete and integrated facilities save additional time and money.

ROCKET MOTORS, INSTRUMENTATION, instrumented rocket vehicles, ground support—any part of a rocket system—can be developed and produced to your specifications, delivered on time and within budget. CDC experience backlog eliminates costly experimentation and saves precious time.

THE MARQUARDT CORPORATION strengthens CDC's capability with additional management-engineering resources, facilities and financial resources. Consolidation of the two corporations forecasts a considerable expansion of CDC facilities and capabilities during 1959.

AT YOUR SERVICE: the proven capable organization of Cooper Development Corporation. For an on-time, minimum-cost solution to any problem involving military or research rockets, contact: Contract Planning Manager, Cooper Development Corporation, 2626 South Peck Road, Monrovia, California.

COMBINED ENGINEERING RESOURCES of Cooper Development Corporation and The Marquardt Corporation can bring unique mind-power to bear on forward research and speedy development of any anticipated research rocket program.

COMBINED FACILITIES utilize the highly skilled manpower and latest manufacturing techniques of both Corporations to give CDC rocket systems built-in reliability and translate advanced paper concepts to field-reliable hardware.

COMBINED FIELD-TEST RESOURCES of CDC and Marquardt provide unequalled capability in final system stages—final test and field launching, data transmission and evaluation, and delivery of analytical and summary reports.

Engineers and Scientists will find challenging career opportunities at CDC and at all Marquardt Divisions. For details contact Marquardt's Professional Personnel Department, 16555 Saticoy St., Van Nuys, Calif.

Col. Milligan A "Dr."

Col. Mary Louise Milligan, Director of the WACs, has been awarded an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree by Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Maj. Gen. Rinaldo Van Brunt, Deputy CG, Second Army, attended the commencement exercises as the representative of Secretary of the Army, Wilber M. Brucker, and brought to Colonel Milligan a message of congratulations from Mr. Brucker.

Colonel Milligan's degree was conferred in recognition of "her pioneering efforts in an uncharted field of women's endeavor." The citation continues: "She has faced prejudice with an unfailing sense of humor and unfamiliar situations with resourcefulness. Throughout her career she has remained essentially an educator in demonstrating to both men and women new ways in which women can serve their country in peace and in war. In her travels over the face of the earth she has taught democracy as democracy can only be taught, by her own example."

An alumna of the Margaret Morrison Carnegie College, Colonel Milligan is the first candidate to be presented by that school for an honorary degree in the history of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, NATO Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic and Commander in Chief U. S. Atlantic Fleet, has announced that United States and Canadian navies will team up for the fourth annual combined U. S.-Canadian mine warfare exercise beginning 6 July. The exercise, called Sweep Clear IV, will take place off Charleston, S. C., and will last 18 days.

Admiral Wright has appointed VAdm. William G. Cooper, USN, Commander Ocean Sub-Area (NATO) to conduct the exercise. RAdm. D. C. Varian, USN, Commander Mine Force U. S. Atlantic Fleet, whose headquarters are at Charleston, S. C., will be tactical commander of the participating forces. RAdm. H. F. Pullen, RCN, Commander Canadian Sub-Area (NATO) has designated Cdr. A. C. Campbell, RCN, to command the six Royal Canadian Navy minesweepers taking part in Sweep Clear IV.

Sweep Clear IV will put into practice the lessons learned during the past three similar annual exercises, all designed to train NATO naval forces in carrying out combined mine warfare operations.

A two-day conference to discuss lessons learned during Sweep Clear IV will be held at Charleston after the at-sea phase of the exercise.

Canadian and U. S. Navy ships will return to their respective national commands upon completion of the exercise 24 July.

An Annual Military Assistance Naval Orientation Course for Military Nurses of Friendly-Allied Countries has been established by the office of the Navy Surgeon General. The first class is scheduled to convene in September at the U. S. Naval Medical School, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md. The 10-week course has been designed to cover all phases of Nursing Service Administration as conducted in the U. S. Navy and will consist of lectures, demonstrations, observations, seminar discussions and department tours. Navy Nurse Corps officers will serve as instructors.

Northrop Corporation and Societa Edison of Milan, major Italian electric power company, have completed formation of a new Italian communications engineering company known as Edison-Page, S. p. A. The announcement followed a meeting in Rome of Thomas V. Jones, president of Northrop, and George Valerio, managing director of Societa Edison, in which they finalized negotiations and mapped the operational program for the new joint venture company.

Northrop, through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Page Communications Engineers, Inc., acquired 49 per cent of the stock of Edison-Page with Societa Edison owning 51 per cent.

The destroyer USS Ringgold (DD-500) will be transferred to the Federal Republic of Germany 14 July. A crew of German Navy officers and men are at the Charleston Naval Shipyard training for service aboard the ship which will be redesignated the Z-2. The Bonn Government has named Commander Guenter, of Keil, Germany, the Z-2's skipper.

A joint European production program to build the Mach 2 all-weather F-105D fighter-bomber for service in the NATO air forces has been proposed in Paris by the American builder of the supersonic jet. The program, as outlined by Mundt I. Peale, president of Republic Aviation Corporation, would establish a "second source" of supply in Europe for the supersonic nuclear-armed jet by subcontracting its production to various aircraft firms in the NATO nations. He made his proposal at a news conference prior to addressing the American Club there.

Col. Earle B. Nichols has been assigned as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, for the U. S. Army Advisory Group, Korea (KMAC). Colonel Nichols was last assigned with the staff and faculty of the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va. His wife, Pauline, lives at 64 Woodmont Rd., Alexandria, Va.

A proposed joint manufacturing enterprise for the production of a European version of the C-130 Hercules propjet transport was revealed at the French International Air Show in Paris by a Lockheed official, R. I. Mitchell, and other executives of the company's Georgia Division. Discussions have been initiated with Western European nations toward this end, Mitchell said.

The C-130 Hercules, built by Lockheed at Marietta, Ga., is in service with the U. S. Air Force's Tactical Air Command, the Royal Australian Air Force, the U. S. Air Force Photographic and Charting Service (MATS) and will soon join the U. S. Marines and Coast Guard.

Five Western European allies—France, Italy, Germany, Belgium and Holland—signed an agreement with the United States recently to mass-produce within their own countries the Army-Raytheon Hawk missile, soon to become operational with American troops. Under terms of the agreement, the NATO nations will use their own monies, manpower and other production facilities. They expect to produce more than $400 million of Hawks. The five nations will pool their funds to finance the estimated $300 to $500 million program, and have formed a managing company, the Societe Europeenne de Teleguidage.

D. C. Board Approves Distaff Residence

Conditional approval for the erection of the Army Distaff Foundation's residence for Army widows and other distaff relatives of deceased Army officers has been given to the Foundation by the Washington, D. C., Board of Zoning Adjustment.

The residence, planned on the estate of the late insurance executive, William Montgomery, at 6200 Nebraska Ave., N.W., has been opposed by neighboring homeowners, who contended that it would tend to lower property values and would cause traffic problems.

Final decision to erect the residence on the Montgomery estate is expected shortly from Foundation's Board of Directors, chairmanned by General John E. Dahlquist, Jr., USA-Ret.

Army School Population Grows In Europe

U. S. ARMY EUROPE HEADQUARTERS
HEIDELBERG, GERMANY

THE U. S. Army in Europe faces a sharp growth in its family school program, with no prospect for increased teacher or budget support.

That was the word given to a JOURNAL reporter here by Maj. Gen. Philip Lindeman, USAREUR G-1. He said that the USAREUR School System, which now has 48,000 pupils, is planning for an enrollment of 67,000 by fiscal year '62.

The budget of $14,143,000, which supports 89 elementary and 19 high schools, is not expected to be increased significantly.

This will mean more students per teacher. The USAREUR School System now employs 2,315 teachers and 221 administrators.

General Lindeman noted that recent statistics show that graduates of USAREUR high schools rank in the top half of their classes in colleges, universities, and military academies in the United States—"a fine reflection on the quality of our teaching."

General's Daughter And Captain's Wife

MISS Cathy Risden, left, daughter of Brig. Gen. Richard A. Risden, Commander of Ft. Carson, Colo., and the 9th Infantry Division and Mrs. Donald K. Chung, a former Junior High School teacher at Carson and the wife of an Army captain there, were graduated from the 1959 class of the Colorado College, Colorado Springs.

PEOPLE OF SERVICE

3d Armored Div. Wives Club Gets Assist From L. A. In Helping German Orphans

Frankfurt—When Mrs. Karl Cervik, Treasurer of the 3d Armored Division Economy Wives Club, wrote to her folks in Los Angeles telling them that her club was trying to find a way to obtain clothes for the children in the Monikaheim Orphanage here, her mother, Mrs. Rose Ford of 1558 West 110th Street, Los Angeles, decided to help.

She contacted the members of her own bridge club and they responded with cloth, materials and patterns, which Mrs. Ford forwarded to her daughter.

After a few months of "sewing bees" on the part of the Wives Club, cloth donated by Miss Edith Harris in Los Angeles became dresses and shirts for the Monikaheim children.

The sewing project began last Christmas. At the same time the Wives Club started a series of cake sales, using the proceeds to buy socks and underwear to complete the kids' new outfits.

The ladies recently presented 20 outfitts of new clothes to Monikaheim's Sister Aniceta, then joined the two to four-year-olds at lunch, helping the older girls in charge of feeding the tots.

"We'd like to make this a continuing project," explained club president Mrs. Jerry W. Christopher, "if we could continue to receive donations of cloth from groups at home. We like getting together to do the sewing and the kids need the clothes."

Parris Island, S. C.—With final tabulations complete in the Navy Relief Society's annual drive for funds at this East Coast Marine Corps Recruit Depot, total contributions are over the $8,500 mark.

Proving wholeheartedly that they believe in "taking care of their own," Marines, sailors and civilian employees aboard the Depot combined with those of the U. S. Naval Hospital, Beaufort, S. C., contributed a total of $8,594.75. The 1958 drive netted $8,800.

Col. E. C. Jacobs, Commanding Officer, U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Monroe, presented Certificates of Appreciation to 18 Gray Ladies during a recent ceremony.

Colonel Jacobs and Dr. H. F. Jackson, Pediatrician at the hospital, expressed their appreciation for the many volunteer hours the ladies have spent to augment the hospital staff.

Ladies receiving the Certificates were: Mesdames Laura Alban, Jane Andrae, Lynn Hinterhoff, Betty Houghton, Shirley Levens, Marguerite Lilly, Ruth Marpane, Pat McGiffert, Roberta Murray, Jean Norris, Katie Phillips, Tora Ray,

A letter of recognition was presented Mrs. George Gorman, former chairman of volunteers at Robins, for outstanding service and leadership in contributing over 300 hours of her time.

Maj. and Mrs. Harry K. Blake, PACAF HQs., Box 1032, APO 953, San Francisco, have financially "adopted" Constantine Samios, a 9-year-old Greek boy, through Foster Parents' Plan, Inc., 352 Fourth Avenue, New York City. The Foster Parents have promised to contribute $15 a month toward the child's support for at least one year.

Ft. Lee, Va.—Eighteen new Red Cross staff aides were capped 9 June with Mrs. Roy Linder, Vice Chairman of Ft. Lee Volunteers, in charge of arrangements.

U. S. NATO Pioneer Atomic Force Takes 50% Manpower Blow; Loses Inf. Units

From first page—

to be under operational control of the Southern European Task Force with headquarters at Verona.

But it will be some time before the Italian rocket battalions achieve the combat readiness of the two U. S. Honest John battalions that have been deactivated.

A pointed measure of the manpower cutback that the 1st Missile Command has been required to absorb as a result of over-all Army losses is the fact that Colonel Coburn's command now must rely entirely on the crack Alpini troops of the Italian Army for security forces.

Before the cutback, each Honest John battalion was authorized a company of U. S. Infantry attached.

The U. S. Infantry soldiers who provided security for one of the two Corporal battalions are gone. Again it will be up to the Alpini to double their forces assigned to Corporal security forces.

The Missile Command's Sky Cavalry Squadron, which was reorganized last June to give the Command what was described as "a true target acquisition capability," is being slimmed to a troop or company-sized unit.

Lt. Col. Joseph L. Gude, the Command's senior Army Aviator who had commanded the SkyCav Squadron, has been made Command G-3, a noteworthy assignment for an Infantry officer.

The 50% SkyCav strength cut is paralleled by the reduction of the Command's highly specialized Engineer battalion to company strength.

Its mission, on request from the Italians, would be to use atomic demolitions to seal the six mountain passes to northern Italy.

The Command's Signal Company, responsible for an area about 100 miles deep with a 170-mile perimeter, remains at about the same strength, as does the Ordnance Battalion.

1ST U. S. ARMY MISSILE COMMAND VICENZA, ITALY

Col. Melville B. Coburn, formerly on duty with the Army General Staff, will complete a year's service as Commander of the Southern European Task Force's 1st U. S. Army Missile Command here on 14 August.

A '35 USMA graduate, he was Division Artillery Executive Officer with the 3d Infantry Division in Korea and Deputy G-3 of the Eighth Army prior to assignment to the National War College at the end of 1953.

Colonel and Mrs. Coburn are the parents of a son, John, 17, who expects to enroll at Brown University.

The Command's CofS is Col. Richard Jones, an Infantry officer in a unit that is heavy with Artillerymen.

Major unit commanders include Lt. Col. Leon Crenshaw, 80th Missile Battalion (Corporal); Lt. Col. Fred Scott, 82d Missile Battalion (Corporal); Lt. Col. Henry Banke, 328th Ordnance Battalion; Maj. Jeff Forsythe, 101st Aerial Survey Company; Maj. George Burns, 124th Signal Company; Capt. Richard W. Brown, 62d Engineer Com-ters, however, has been eliminated to save spaces.

Colonel Coburn told reporters that the SkyCav cut would be offset partially by the arrival of new target acquisition equipment, mainly the Northrop S-1-D drone.

It is planned that the Command will have six such target acquisition drones, with improved devices for this mission expected at a later time.

Ups And Downs Of An Atomic Force

1ST U. S. ARMY MISSILE COMMAND VICENZA, ITALY

THE U. S. Army's atomic force in Northern Italy—now in a "down" phase—had been steadily on the rise in combat capability since October 1955. That was the time when an Honest John Artillery Battery first reached SETAF, followed in April 1956 by a nuclear-equipped Engineer Barrier Detachment.

In August 1956, an Honest John Battalion was activated, designated as the 1st Missile Battalion (Honest John), 79th Artillery.

The two Corporal battalions, 1st Missile Battalions of 82d and 80th Artillery, arrived in SETAF in September and November 1956, respectively, followed by the 1st Missile Battalion (Honest John) (SP), 77th Artillery in December 1957.

On Christmas Day 1957, the Missile Command Headquarters, previously known as Task Force Alfa of SETAF, was activated. It became fully operational in June 1958. At that time, the 52d Armored Infantry Battalion was reorganized into the 2d Squadron, 16th Sky Cavalry.

As reported in the adjacent article, the Command has lost half its manpower, half its atomic punching power, and its Sky Cavalry force has been crippled.

NOTES ON NATO TOUR:

Admiral Uses "War Room"—AF General "Air Room"; Turkish Chief Is Saluted

(JOURNAL Assistant Editor Daniel Z. Henkin is in Europe on an Air Force-sponsored visit to major NATO headquarters and to selected Air Force, Army, and Navy units. The following dispatch from Naples, recounts "People and Places" notes of particular interest to members of the Services and their families.)

THE briefing room used by Admiral Charles R. "Cat" Brown, USN, CinC of Allied Forces Southernmost Europe at Naples, Italy, is called the "Commander's War Room." In an immediately adjacent building, one of his subordinate commanders, Lt. Gen. Richard C. Lindsay, USAF, Commander of Allied Air Forces Southern Europe, prefers to designate a room he uses for the same purpose as the "Air Room."

MAJ. GEN. CHARLES L. MULLENS, USA-Ret., center, chats with Gen. C. D. Eddleman, U. S. Army, Europe commander-in-chief, left, and Maj. Gen. P. F. Lindeman, USAREUR Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, right.

U. S. Army-Italian Army Missile Integration Discussed By SETAF Chief

SOUTHERN EUROPEAN TASK FORCE HQS. VERONA, ITALY

MAJ. Gen. John P. Daley, the U. S. Army's top commander in Italy, says it would be desirable to integrate Italian officers in his Southern European Task Force Headquarters "provided I am given operational control of all troops."

This was the SETAF Commander's response to a question put to him by a JOURNAL reporter at a press briefing which began at 5:53 p.m. on 24 June. General Daley met with visiting reporters after participating in welcoming ceremonies for General deGaulle at Verona.

The SETAF Commander was asked about the possibility of joint staffing coincidental with the deactivation of SETAF's two Honest John rocket battalions and the activation of two Italian Army Honest John units trained by SETAF's 1st U. S. Army Missile Command.

General Daley said such integration was entirely feasible, but he stressed that the SETAF Commander, in such a case, must have full operational control over the Italian rocket units.

Chances are good, it would seem, that just such an arrangement will be worked out with Italy and the U. S. and SHAPE.

Asked if SETAF faced additional manpower cuts in fiscal year '60, following the drop in the Missile Command's strength from 4,000 to 2,000, General Daley said: "I certainly hope not."

He outlined for newsmen the essential mission of SETAF—namely to support NATO ground forces in northern Italy and to be ready, if necessary, to seal off historic Alpine invasion passes, notably

Aerial Circuit Riders

CHAPLAIN (1st Lt.) Louis A. Foley, right, bids goodbye to Sergeant Henry Gonzalez as he prepares to leave for the next leg of his helicopter tour of radio relay stations throughout southern Germany.

In the background, boarding the helicopter is Chaplain (1st Lt.) Edward M. Mueller, who joined Chaplain Foley on the flying circuit ride.

Purpose of the trips, says Chaplain Foley, is to "see that you're taking care of yourselves," and that the personnel who man the small radio stations throughout Germany have "as few headaches as possible."

At a reception for visiting newsmen at Heidelberg, General Clyde D. Eddleman, USA, CinC of U. S. Army Europe, introduced two officers, who won solid rounds of applause. They were General Rustu Erdelhuhn, Chief of the Turkish General Staff, and Maj. Gen. Charles L. "Moon" Mullins, USA-Ret., now living in Nogales, Ariz. Hailing General Mullins as "one of the greatest Irishmen of them all," General Eddleman was forced to give him the floor for a few remarks. Ticking off a list of four-star officers with whom he had been associated at West Point, including General Nathan F. Twining USAF, JCS Chairman, General Mullins conceded: "I don't say that I made them, but then I didn't stop them either." Attending the reception was one of General Mullins' WWII regimental commanders in the Pacific, Maj. Gen. Philip Lindeman, former 8th Infantry Division CG in Germany and now USAREUR G-1.

Few Officer Messes in the Armed Forces can count such assets as those reported by the Verona, Italy club in its last statement—$256.81 for scales and fighting cocks. The cocks are not likely to scratch up any difficulties; they are made of brass.

Lt. Gen. F. W. Farrell, USA, Seventh Army Commander, scored a hit with the U. S. reporters. Schedule difficulties prevented a visit by the reporters to the general's headquarters at Stuttgart. Instead, he flew in his Beechcraft to Straubing, home of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, to present a briefing for the newsmen, who themselves had just arrived by deHavilland Otters—workhorse plane of the Seventh Army—from Heidelberg.

Few people in the Armed Forces spend more time smack on the Iron Curtain than M/Sgt. Robert Sauter of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment. Fluent in German, he is the key interpreter between officers and men of the Regiment and the crack Bavarian Border Police. During a 23 June visit by newsmen to Eisenstein, where the German-Czech border runs directly through the railroad station, Sergeant Sauter interpreted for Herr Fritz Stoltz, who heads a 250-man Bavarian Border force which covers 140 kilometers.

Maj. Gen. Frederick J. Brown, USA, who coordinated the U. S. Army Europe press briefing as CofS, gets a new assignment. He will succeed Maj. Gen. Thomas F. Van Natta as 3d Armored Division CG. An Army Aviator, General Van Natta will become USAREUR G-2.

the Gorizia Pass.

Joined at the briefing by SETAF's G-3, Col. John Lynch, General Daley, former Army Director of Special Weapons, said in answer to a question that SETAF "would be a lovely place" for deployment of the Pershing missile, now under development by the Martin Company.

The feeling at SETAF Headquarters and in its Missile Command at Vicenza is that the mountainous area of Northern Italy would provide a great measure of security against enemy destruction of a striking force capability with the Pershing.

However, the Pershing is still some several years away from operational use. Before that, SETAF officers are hopeful that an early decision will be made for deployment here of the Sperry Sergeant missile.

Pentagon Considers Longer TDY Payments, Temp. Assignments May Exceed Six Months

Longer temporary duty assignments for some military personnel are being contemplated by Pentagon officials with the blessing of Comptroller General Joseph Campbell.

Under current practices, temporary duty assignments with the authorization of travel per diem payments are limited to periods of at most five or six months. Assignments of over six months are considered as permanent change of station and men so assigned cannot collect the travel payments.

At the request of the Army, Mr. Campbell reconsidered his position on the six-month limitation on TDY orders. In Decision B-138760 he conceded that there

Martin Unit Supports Titan Development

The Martin Company, Baltimore Md., has formed a new Activation Division, under the direction of Vernon Rawlings, to act as the integrating contractor for the Titan ICBM weapon system in the field.

The new unit will operate under the direction of the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division, Englewood, Calif. It will insure the operational readiness of the Titan system in accordance with Air Force schedules.

Early in May construction started on launchers for a Titan squadron at Lowry AFB, Colo., and work on a second squadron in that area is scheduled to begin shortly.

Additional sites have been scheduled for construction this fall at Mountain Home, Idaho, and Rapid City, S. D.

Aeronutronics Merges With Ford Motor Co.

Aeronutronic Systems, Inc., merged with the Ford Motor Company 1 July to become a new end-product division of the Ford company.

A majority-owned subsidiary of Ford since 1956, Aeronutronic maintains operations at Glendale, Newport Beach, Santa Ana and Maywood, Calif. It now has under construction and in planning a $22 million engineering and research center on its 200-acre Newport Beach site.

Aeronutronic is now working on more than 30 prime contracts with the Department of Defense and other government agencies, including projects on the Dynasoar and ICBM programs.

From 1957 to 1958 it rose from 132d to 48th place among the top 500 Department of Defense contractors in net value of prime research and development contracts.

Aeronutronic President, Gerald J. Lynch, will remain as General Manager of the new Ford Division.

The division's fields of activity will remain unchanged, with its five operating groups continuing to concentrate on computer operations, range systems, tactical weapons systems, space technology and advanced research.

New "Purple K Powder" Swift Death To Blazes

A new fire-fighting agent—known as "Purple K Powder"—has been developed by the Naval Research Laboratory, Washington, D. C., and will be used in all Navy conventional fire extinguishers.

The chemical has been dubbed "Purple K Powder" because it causes fires to take on a lavender color while being smothered.

The Navy said the dense white clouds of finely powdered potassium bicarbonate thrown out by fire extinguishers kill gasoline and oil fires twice as fast as chemical agents now in use.

"Purple K" will be a particular boon to fire fighters who tackle gasoline blazes resulting from aircraft crashes. Speed is essential in rescuing pilots from cockpits of downed planes.

The Navy said one of the new agent's most important uses will be in its forthcoming "Air Lift" fire extinguisher. The new extinguisher is capable of being carried by helicopter and lowered at the scene of a fire.

Bell To Build Turbine Copter For Navy

Bell Helicopter Corporation, Ft. Worth, Tex., has been awarded a Navy contract for a turbine-powered light utility helicopter that promises increased performance and simplified maintenance. It will be an advanced version of Bell's Navy HUL-1.

To be designated the HUL-2, the model will be powered by the new Allison YT63-A-3 turbo-shaft engine of 250 shaft horsepower.

Bell engineers say the helicopter will have a hovering ceiling in excess of 15,000 feet, maximum rate of climb of more than 1,300 feet per minute, maximum speed of more than 110 miles per hour, vertical rate of climb of more than 1,000 feet per minute, range of more than 200 miles, payload of 1,000 pounds in addition to 170-pound pilot (for 200 miles).

Basically, except for the turbine engine, the HUL-2 will be similar to Bell's famed 47J Ranger, commercial model in use around the globe.

The contract calls for building and testing of two HUL-2s.

Nuclear Helicopter Proposed For Army

Bell Helicopter Corporation, Ft. Worth, Tex., has completed feasibility tests on a giant, nuclear-powered helicopter that could have a fuselage 300 feet in length and cruise at 200 miles per hour.

Although Bell officials emphasized that their studies were strictly a drawing board project and there are no present plans to build the big chopper, the company has proposed a plan to the Army for preliminary design work leading to such an aircraft.

Bill says its feasibility studies indicated that the 500,000-pound craft would be easier to develop in many respects than an atom-powered high-speed airplane.

Raytheon To Buy Sorensen

Plans for the purchase of the assets and business of Sorensen and Co., Inc., manufacturers of controlled power supply equipment, by the Raytheon Company have been announced by C. F. Adams, Raytheon president, following the signing of an agreement between the two companies. The Sorensen firm employs approximately 400 men and women at its South Norwalk, Conn. and New York City plants.

SecDef Tells Of Special Materials Program

The Advanced Research Projects Agency has been assigned "a basic research program looking toward development of new materials for military applications," Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy has announced.

The Secretary said the program will be managed by ARPA in cooperation with the Military Departments and the Office of the Director of Defense Research and Engineering.

The DoD Chief stated that he anticipated approximately $15 will be allocated to the special program in Fiscal Year 1960.

Purpose of the new program, Secretary McElroy explained "is underlined by the fact that materials themselves are recognized as a serious limiting factor in most weapons systems development. Super-strength materials for across-the-board applications—tanks, guns, rockets, missiles and space vehicles—structural materials resistant to vast temperature extremes, and new materials for electronic and electrical circuitry operating at high temperature, are required."

Defense Contracts Manager

Russell B. Raabe has been named Contracts Manager of the Defense Products Division of Fairchild Camera and Instrument Corporation, Syosett, Long Island, N. Y., according to an announcement by C. J. O'Donnell, Division General Manager.

Prior to joining Fairchild Camera, Mr. Raabe had been Manager of the Contract Department of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation for eight years.

Wendell W. Suydam of 37 Glenwood Road, West Hartford, Conn., has been named manager of the overhaul and repair department of Hamilton Standard, division of United Aircraft Corporation. He replaces Samuel B. Sherwin, West Hartford, who was recently named manager of the Ketay Department of Norden Division of United Aircraft. Mr. Suydam joined Hamilton Standard last December as assistant purchasing manager. A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in 1938, he has been associated with aeronautical engineering throughout his career.

Crosley Division of the Avco Corporation, Cincinnati, Ohio, has named Mr. Walter Hasenzahl to be Director of Manufacturing Engineering. During WWII, he rose from private to captain with the 20th Air Force in Guam.

Cel. Arthur J. Wilde, USAR, regional representative for Motorola Military Electronics Division, Dayton, has been elected Vice President of the National Aeronautical Electrical Conference for 1959-60.

Roland V. Haskins, an Air Force pilot from 1951-57, has been appointed Aviation Sales Engineer for Collins Radio Company's Central Region Sales Office, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Promotion of Robert F. Dirkes, assistant vice president—Facsimile and Private Wire Services, to be general manager of Western Union's newly-created Government and Contract Sales Division has been announced by George G. Creal, vice president of the company's Marketing Department.

During World War II, his duties included speeding up Army communication circuits, applying multiplex telegraphy to Navy radio circuits, and the design of an automatic film selector for the Signal Corps. In a pioneering step leading to the present era of integrated data processing use of private wire systems, he worked with scientists of the U. S. Navy and Harvard University on the Navy's Mark II Computer which utilized "common language" telegraph perforated tape in its operation.

Metals Center Needs Information

General S. E. Anderson, AMC Commander, has asked all Air Materiel Command installations and contractors to aid the Defense Metals Information Center in the collection of information on metals and coatings suitable for outer space environments.

Located at the Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus, Ohio, the Center needs reports and technical data on titanium, beryllium, refractory metals, high-strength alloys for elevated temperature service, coatings against corrosion and oxidation resistance, and thermal protection systems. Materials collected will be made available to both Government agencies and contractors.

Rocket Switches Set

The Air Materiel Command's Aeronautical Systems Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, will close its Guided Air Rockets (GAR) weapon system project office 1 July.

GAR procurement responsibility will be transferred to the weapon system project offices whose fighter aircraft use each of the GAR systems.

Specifically, the F-101 WSPO will now manage the GAR 1-D and 2-A Falcons and the MG-13 fire control system because models of the F-101 carry these weapons and the MG-13. The F-106 WSPO will handle the GAR 3-A and 4-A and the MA-1 fire control system.

The GAR 11, which is being designed primarily for the F-102 will also be handled by the F-106 office. Control of the GAR 8 Sidewinder goes to the F-104 WSPO.

Admiral Brown Sounds a Warning: Don't Tempt The Enemy With Weakness

ALLIED FORCES SOUTHERN EUROPE
NAPLES, ITALY

"We cannot afford to reach a position that would tempt the enemy." This was the statement made here 26 June to visiting U. S. reporters by Admiral Charles R. "Cat" Brown, USN, Commander-in-Chief Allied Forces Southern Europe.

The former U. S. Sixth Fleet Commander who took the NATO command on 2 January 1959, declared: "The only hope we've got for peace is to maintain a firm determination that attack against one NATO nation is an attack against all."

Emphasizing that strength and determination would deter Soviet aggression and assure peace, Admiral Brown said that the "NATO spirit is nowhere higher than in Allied Forces Southern Europe."

Admiral Brown heads an integrated staff of officers from six of the 15 NATO nations, charged with the mission of defending Italy, Greece and Turkey—each a mountain studded peninsula.

The admiral told reporters that AFSE is a "real and effective deterrent to aggression, fully capable, if necessary, of employing missiles and bombs of this era."

Major headquarters under Admiral Brown are Allied Land Forces Southern Europe at Verona, Italy; Allied Land Forces Southeast at Izmir, Turkey, under Lt. Gen. Paul D. Harkins, USA; and Allied Air Forces Southern Europe at Naples commanded by Lt. Gen. Richard C. Lindsey, USAF.

Although not under AFSE's command in peacetime, the U. S. Sixth Fleet is earmarked for NATO service in event of hostilities.

The Sixth Fleet's liaison officer to the NATO command is RAdm. Ralph S. Clark, USN.

General Patton's Former Headquarters Is Seventh Army NCO Training Site

FLINT KASERNE
BAD TOELZ, GERMANY

A WWII school for Nazi SS officer candidates and the postwar headquarters of General George S. Patton, Jr., Flint Kaserne today is the home of the Seventh Army's NonCommissioned Officer Academy.

Under Col. Michael Paulick, who also commands the Army's 10th Special Forces Group (see Page 4), the Academy during the next 12 months will see its enrollment climb above the 50,000 mark since its activation in 1949.

Colonel Paulick told newsmen visiting the NCO Academy in connection with the USAF National Media Tour, that the school has graduated about 36,500 soldiers of the 46,800 who have been enrolled.

About 4,000 soldiers will enter the Academy in the next 12 months.

Standards are high, says Colonel Paulick, but he is quick to point out that these standards have been set and are maintained by the noncommissioned officers themselves.

The briefing for the reporters was prepared and presented exclusively by the NonCommissioned Officer instructors.

SFC Elbert Crosby told how the Academy was founded 10 years ago at the order of General I. D. White, now U. S.

Army Pacific Commander, with General Bruce C. Clarke, present Continental Army Commander at Ft. Monroe, Va., as the first Commandant.

The work of the three major Academy committees, Map Reading, Leadership, and Instructor Training was described, respectively, by Sgt. Alan Curtis, SFC Ernest Dickman, and M/Sgt. Benjamin Wilds.

The four-week course includes 41 hours of map reading instruction and practical application, 40 hours of leadership work, and 40 hours of instructor training, climaxed by 50-minute platform presentation by each student.

Sergeant Wilds, who won an ovation from the newsmen, made it a point to emphasize that NCO instructors are told not to pick up a pointer unless they mean to use it and then to be careful that it is used for its designed purpose.

He also explained how training aids should be employed. The sergeant related how NCO students who are fathers are asked in classroom demonstrations to explain, with their hands behind them, to a bachelor soldier how to diaper a baby.

Then the bachelor student is called forward, given a diaper and a doll and told to accomplish the mission on the basis of the advice he has obtained without benefit of a training aid.

Sergeant Wilds says this gets across to the class the effectiveness of appropriate training aids.

Chances are, however, that Sergeant Wilds might well be able to give a diaper briefing without any outside help. He is the father of seven children.

M/G Ostrander Named ARPA Deputy Director

Maj. Gen. Don R. Ostrander, USAF, has been named to succeed RAdm. John E. Clark, Deputy Director of the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

General Ostrander, Assistant for Guided Missiles Production, NATO Assistant Secretary General (Production and Logistics), Paris, France, reports to his new post 1 October. Admiral Clark goes to a sea command.

The General graduated from the Military Academy 24 February 1914. Prior to his NATO assignment, he was Assistant Deputy Commander for Weapons Systems, ARDC and later, Deputy Commander of Resources, ARDC. He also has served as Commander of Holloman Air Development Center, N. Mex.

He is married to the former Frances Ann Dunn of El Paso, Tex. They have three children: Mary Frances, Don Richard and Sally Ann.

GENERAL GEORGE H. DECKER, Commanding General, Eighth United States Army, left, is greeted by Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, CG of the I U.S. Corps (Group), as he arrived at Camp Red Cloud, Korea, on his farewell tour of I Corps units prior to his departure from the Far East. Gen. Decker is slated to become Army Vice Chief of Staff.

Army Orders Trucks Congress Criticized

Army Navy Air Force Journal 27
4 July 1959 (Vol. 96, P. 1359)

The Army this week announced the award of a $15,070,000 contract for the purchase of M-151 quarter-ton utility trucks which have been eight years in development at a cost of approximately $7,000,000.

The truck was the result of a development contract with the Ford Motor Company which also won the production contract after competitive proposals had been considered, the announcement stated. The production contract provides for the building of 4,050 of the vehicles, making a unit price of $3,720.

The announcement said that the new truck will succeed the Jeep as the Army's "tactical, commercial and reconnaissance vehicle."

"It is lighter in weight than the Jeep," the Army stated, "and is air dropable. Among its features are rugged construction, cross-country mobility, low fuel consumption and economy in maintenance."

The production contract for the vehicle was made over objections voiced by both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees in their reports on the 1959 appropriation bill. The House Committee said the M-151 represents "at best modifications of obsolescent designs" and expressed a hope that the Army can obtain light weight vehicles of "advanced design." The Senate Committee's report agreed and added that it hoped the Army would, instead, "proceed on an accelerated program of full-scale tests of a whole family of platform vehicles."

The Army said that it has no plans for further production orders of the M-151.

GENERAL TAYLOR BIDS FAREWELL

To All Members of the United States Army:

"On the close of over forty-one years in uniform, I wish to express to all members—military and civilian—of all components of the United States Army, my personal gratitude and appreciation for the loyal and devoted manner in which each of you has contributed to the attainment of the objectives of the Army during my tenure as Chief of Staff.

"By your hard work, untiring enthusiasm, and conscientious efforts, you have created a distinguished record of world-wide Army accomplishment—often under difficult conditions and with limited resources. In so doing, you have made a significant contribution to the effectiveness of the Army's combat-readiness and to the security of our Nation. As my active military service comes to an end, I leave you with the sincere conviction that the future of the Army and the Nation has never before been in the hands of a more dedicated, patriotic group of Americans.

"In the days ahead, you will continue to be confronted with many challenges and demanding tasks. I am confident that as you meet and overcome them, you will do so in the same spirit of high resolve and determination which has characterized your performance in the past. May God bless each of you and strengthen you in your future endeavors.

"MAXWELL D. TAYLOR,
"GENERAL, UNITED STATES ARMY
"CHIEF OF STAFF"

Gen. Weyland L.L.D.

The University of Akron has conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws on General O. P. Weyland, Commander of Tactical Air Command. At commencement exercises, General Weyland was recognized as "the world's foremost tactical airman," and cited for the accomplishments of that command under his leadership.

NEW PENTAGON DIALING

A direct dial system for placing telephone calls to the Defense Department goes into effect 12 July.

On that date four additional exchange numbers will be used in the Departmental Dial Tandem System: Oxford 4, Oxford 5, Oxford 6, and Oxford 7. These four digits have been selected because all DoD extension numbers begin with either 4, 5, 6 or 7.

Persons calling from outside the Department can easily determine new call numbers by prefixing OX to present extension numbers.

If an extension number is not known, or if miscellaneous information is desired, the caller will dial LI 5-6700, the number currently in use.

Internal DoD dial calls will continue to require only the usual five digits.

ROA Asks Union With USMC-Res.

The Reserve Officers Association convention in Denver 24-27 June has voted to support integration of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association into the ROA organization.

Extending a bid for meetings between the two groups "to discuss the possibility of coordinated action and purpose," the ROA formally put itself on record as supporting the merger.

During the convention, delegates recommended that the Navy upgrade the position of the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Naval Reserve by the creation of a new three-star billet of Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Naval Reserve Affairs, reporting directly to the Chief of Naval Operations. The Assistant CNO for Naval Reserve is presently under the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Personnel in the chain of command.

The ROA also went on record as opposing the disestablishment of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces. Elimination of this office had been recommended by the Frank Report in May.

For all Services, the ROA proposed that the Defense Department ask Congress for higher quarters allowances based on the Department of Labor Cost of Living Index.

From first page—

recommendations in these areas, the Senate also agreed to a Committee mandate which requires the Defense Department, beginning next year, to obtain specific legislative authority for the design, development or procurement of all aircraft and missiles before funds are appropriated by Congress.

The report-deadline and the Senate's missile-aircraft-authorization edict—written into the fiscal '60 Military Construction Authorization bill—are expected to be opposed by the House when the measure goes to conference.

The Senate voted its approval of the MCA program after the Armed Services Committee revised its earlier Hercules-Bomarc recommendations (THE JOURNAL, 23 May).

Although the Committee charged earlier that the Hercules is "virtually obsolete," the group restored authority for the construction of 58 Nike-Hercules batteries after hearing the Defense Department's new "master plan."

A reduction of $17.3 million in the fiscal '60 Hercules construction program was continued in effect on the advice of Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, and $29 million was chopped from the fiscal '60 construction program for Bomarc and Sage.

The Committee said, however, that the new air defense plan "leaves much to be desired," and that it had been accepted with "reservations." The Senators questioned "whether too much reliance is being placed upon defense as compared to sharpening our offense with modernization of the Army, the fleet, and perhaps more emphasis on manned interceptors."

The Committee said it expects Secretary McElroy and the Joint Chiefs "to again carefully review the proposed program before construction is begun on new sites."

No clear-cut details of the new air defense plan were given in the Committee's supplemental report, but the group said the plan "which will save the taxpayer some $1.4 billion over the next few years, provides for a reduction and revision in the planned deployment of both Bomarc and Nike-Hercules missile sites, and a revision and strengthening of the electronic ground environment so necessary to the control of the weapons and the air battle."

Hercules defenses, the Committee said, "will be extended to certain carefully selected Strategic Air Command sites."

The Committee agreed with the Defense Department's plan to intensify the anti-missile missile program and expressed "a strong desire" that the Pentagon "proceed with all possible haste with the Nike-Zeus and all other anti-missile missile possibilities."

The newly-adopted "report" section of the MCA bill provides that the Secretary of Defense "shall not later than 31 July 1959, report to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and House of Representatives:

"1—the feasibility of expediting the Bomarc program and utilizing its greater potential coverage and economy of operation in lieu of certain proposed Nike-Hercules installations;

"2—the results of a complete review of all previously programmed missile sites with assurance that the selection of those sites to be constructed was made strictly on the basis of military priorities;

"3—the opinion of the respective Chiefs of Staff on the authorized program for the defense of Hawaii with their recommendations, if any, for modification or change in emphasis and corresponding adjustment of such program;

"4—the latest information on the progress of anti-missile programs with recommendations, if any, for expediting them;

"5—the latest opinion of the respective Chiefs of Staff with respect to the nature of any military threat to the security of the United States in the next five years and their judgments as to whether it is best met by continuing military programs as presently authorized, or whether certain changes should be made in that programming."

Air Force Aid Society Seeks New Members

The Annual Membership Campaign of the Air Force Aid Society will be conducted from 27 July through 8 August.

General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff, urges "enthusiastic participation" in this year's drive to insure the Society's "continued ability to help Air Force families."

The 13-year-old Society's mission is to aid AF families by providing financial assistance to meet unforeseen temporary emergencies. During 1958, the Aid Society disbursed from its General Fund $227,866 in grants, and $2,400,481 in non-interest bearing loans to more than 29,000 Air Force personnel and their families.

During the same period, the General Henry H. Arnold Educational Fund provided financial assistance to 151 Air Force children in colleges and universities for the 1958-59 school year amounting to $40,556 in Grants and $26,038 in Loans.

HOW SAC'S "HOUND DOG" SCENTS ITS TARGET

The crew of the B-52G starts up the jet engine of the sharp-nosed GAM-77 Hound Dog missile hung under its wing... gives its inertial autonavigator the location of the target.

On a "for-real" mission, the Hound Dog would leap toward its target at supersonic speed—very likely a ground-defense center hundreds of miles away. Its guidance system can't be jammed... can't be decoyed.

Purpose of the GAM-77 air-to-ground jet-powered guided missile is to increase the striking power of Boeing's B-52. Sling a pair of Hound Dogs under the wings of the new B-52G—and you have what amounts to a brand-new weapon system.

The GAM-77 program was started in August, 1957. The missile has been put into accelerated development. It already is in its early flight test phase... will be deployed by 1960.

Weapon system contractor: the Missile Division of North American Aviation.
